

GUESTHOUSES GUIDELINES

FOR A JOINT SUSTAINABLE COASTAL TOURISM

Considering the mounting difficulties arising from the local management of wastes, in need to be urgently tackled before they irreversibly affect our earth, ocean, water, air, and thus our own health, Khushi Parisara proposes to find the best strategy for a clean, peaceful and sustainable coastal tourist activity, overcoming stakeholders difficulties.

ETIQUETTE FOR ECO-FRIENDLY GUESTS

Be welcome to our place!

Be well and share your wellness with all around.

Our Government is trying to make India a clean country and we are all involved in that. Some changes are taking place, especially related to waste management.

We crucially need (and request) your aid also, because

YOUR WASTE IS YOUR RESPONSIBILITY

Segregation of stuff that became waste for you, is mandatory and is to be done using the assigned bins for INORGANIC WASTE

1. Plastic bottles (crashed), thick plastic items, metal
2. Glass - bottles, jars, etc.
3. E-waste - cells, electronic items
4. Pads, tampons, diapers, thin filthy plastics, hazardous items, cigarette butts and all non-recyclable items

The ORGANIC WASTE is to be put in the marked compost pit

Not only our premises, but also the stretch of beach in front of our place, we try to keep extremely clean.

If you enjoy its cleanness, please help us to keep it using the bin and, as much as you feel like, plucking unduly thrown items by unmindful visitors.

CONSIDER PLACE & PEOPLE

Save water and energy

Preserve silence

Respect local religious traditions

Convey aid to Nature by all means at your hand

Join the regular cleanups to preserve the seashore.

Give your FEEDBACK on our visitors book directly, or to our Union President.

THANKS FOR YOUR COLLABORATION to protect the fantastic features of the place!

PROTOCOL FOR ECO-FRIENDLY HOTELIERS

Because the excessive growth of visitors, overcrowding certain areas of our coast, threatens the local ecosystems, resources and culture, we are in need of sustainable tourism.

Sustainable tourism, while providing a high level of satisfaction for tourists significant experience, should raise their awareness to foster sustainable practices amongst them.
